

Judy Lee

Volunteer Guide

I was impressed by my good friend's enthusiasm for her educational role in Courage to Care. I thought I would really like to be involved in such a programme.

I have always admired Edmund Burke's adage and after viewing the Courage to Care exhibition in 2010 in Sydney, I was really "hooked" on his message: "When good men do nothing, evil happens".

It is a privilege to help schoolchildren understand the evil inherent in stereotyping and "bullying". I feel that Courage to Care is a two way process. Not only do we, the volunteers, endeavour to open the minds of the school students but we may, in turn, unlock our own feelings towards children of different ethnic backgrounds and through Courage to Care meet on the road to tolerance and understanding.

Courage to Care is also an opportunity for the volunteers to learn from each other's experiences and enjoy the camaraderie of this special group.