Since 1967, my husband John and I have served as Christian pastors, always having concern for the persecuted, the poor and the needy.

Only within recent years have I become aware of the extent of antisemitism with the history of the church. John and I represented the Protestant churches at the international conference “Changing the Future by Confronting the Past”, in Jerusalem in 2001. In 2004, we attended the International School of Holocaust Studies for Educators and Clergy from Abroad, at Yad Vashem in Jerusalem.

Having been a coordinator and guide with Courage to Care since 2003, I now organise the training for all guides. I am convinced that much good can be accomplished if each one of us is willing to speak up and to act on behalf of those in need, and that the Courage to Care Exhibition inspires us to do just that.
