I felt I needed to give something back to my community and the ideals of teaching children the importance of standing up to injustice were very close to my heart.

As a young child I went to school with many Holocaust survivors. I had the good fortune to be born in Australia and escape the horrors of wartime Europe. Nevertheless, I felt involved with the children I met at school. Most of them survived the war because someone hid them, and the courage of these often unknown individuals amazed me.

Courage to Care has opened my eyes to the way even small acts of compassion and humanity can impact positively and have a flow-on effect.

Kindness begets kindness.
