Born in South Africa, I came with my husband Eric to Australia in 1997 and became interested in working as a facilitator with Courage to Care. The South African government did not welcome immigrants from Europe in the pre- and post- World War II period, so I had met very few survivors of the Holocaust.

I love working with young people who learn about rescuers who risked their lives to save others who were persecuted. I am humbled by the generosity of the survivors who tell their stories; and by the way the students react to these, and so learn about people who had the courage to care.

I enjoy helping to facilitate the group discussion which follows the presentations, where I can apply the skills and experience I have gained as a speech pathologist and communication skills trainer.

I consider myself privileged to be part of this amazing venture.
