Volunteer Guide

I was born in New Zealand, my heritage is Eastern European, and I moved to Brisbane in 1970 after I married.

I heard about the Courage to Care programme through the Brisbane Jewish Community, and felt this was a cause I would like to support. I have always identified and empathised with any persecution, whether it be political, religious or social.

I was impressed that ordinary people can become extraordinary heroes, that one person can choose to make a difference. This is such an important lesson for our children. The courageous people showcased in the exhibition do just that. Their inspirational stories must be taught, must be honoured and must be remembered.

It is a privilege to be part of that.
